

To whom it may concern:

I strongly agree with the Indiana No Call Policy, that is currently in effect. It has made the volume of unsolicited calls lessen to an almost enjoyable level. The receiving of calls of solicitation is an annoyance that I can well do without. I would like to see the law strengthened rather than weakened. It would not be so bad if when these companies called the first time they would honor your wishes to not call again. However, most time it leads to an argument about their rights. How about my rights within my own home. Why should I have to be awakened by these calls or my dinner interrupted?

Please leave the law alone or give it more teeth.
Thank You
